BARACA CLASS ENTERTAINS FOR LOCAL EDUCATORS

Supt. Bradner, Dr. Brosheer, President of School Board, and T. R. Hill Speakers at Banquet Last Night.

"SCHOOL PROGRAM" SUBJECT OF SUPERINTENDENT'S TALK

Baraca Hall of the First Baptist Church, artistically decorated in gold and white with an arrangement of white and yellow chrysanthemums, presented a beautiful reception room for the guests of the Baraca Class.

The invited guests, the board of education, faculty of the public schools, members of the church and the staff of the Middlesboro Daily News were greeted on entering by a receiving line composed of Mrs. Sam P. Martin, Mrs J. C Burke, Mrs U. G. Brammett, Mrs. J. W. Charlton, Mrs. J. R. Sampson and Mrs T. Russ Hill.

L. D. Hill was toastmaster of the evening. J. W Allison, president of the Baraca class, welcomed the guests to Baraca Hall in behalf of the class.

Ed Hoe sang, "Song of the Deep," and "Sweet Miss Mary." Mrs. T. Russ Hill and Mrs. J. W. Charlton sang "All Through the Night." A quartet composed of Bill Smith, J. B. Hatfield, Warren Seale and Chas. G. Smyth sang "Call Me Back Pal o' Mine" and "Ten Little Fingers, Ten Little Toes."

Bradner Makes First Address.

J. W. Bradner, superintendent of schools, made the first address of the evening on "The School Program." He said about six months ago he heard something about Middlesboro that made a lasting impression on him. It was the answer to the question, "Are you in favor of issuing school bonds?" This meant to him, he said, that the community had been sold on education and were willing to dig down in their pockets and pay "Of all the good things your community has done," Bradner said, "this is one of the very greatest, for it means you know what good schools mean to you."

The problem of solving the situation of having the boy and girl of 14 and 15 years in the same grade with the boy and girl of 6 years was named as one of the hardest problems with which he had to deal. He said instead of talking of moonlight schools for educating the illiterate adults, he was more interested in educating the children and then there would be no illiterate adults. Last year, he said, less than 55 per cent of the children passed from the grades which they entered. This, he said, was a fearful mortality in passing.

"I am being criticised for the half-day sessions but I feel that this is the only fairly satisfactory way to solve the problem until our new buildings are done." On every hand, he said, there are children working illegally under the age of 16 years. "I am the only one to issue the labor certificates to children who must work and no applications have been made to me. This situation should be looked into."

New Buildings To Help.

The new buildings will give every child a chance to do good work, he says The manual training and domestic science departments were lauded.

In closing Prof. Bradner said he hoped he would not be criticised for his stand in favor of athletics. He said he thoroughly believed in the developing of the body along with the mind. He said he wanted the boys to learn to play the manly game and to recognize that an education meant to teach them to do an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

Dr. C. K. Brosheer made a brief talk on behalf of the school board. He said the object of the board was to have the best school in Kentucky and the problem was to get all the money necessary to put over such a fine program the task of which the members would work on diligently.

T. Russ Hill, teacher of the Baraca class, spoke on "Citizenship" in his usual forceful and magnetic way of speaking which has won him popularity as one of Middlesboro's eternal boosters. He emphasized again and again that no one can talk "Citizenship" and not talk schools. And he named as the big men of any community those men who were planning to have something worthwhile after them for others. He pledged the support of the class to the schools.

BUSINESS REVIEW OF SOUTH GIVEN BY CINCINMATI BANK

Promising Future With Heavy Fall Trade Foreseen After Trying Situation From Strike And Agricultural Conditions

REPORTS OF KENTUCKY, TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA

The Fifth-Third National Bank of Cincinnati has just issued tabulated business reports from a number of southern states with information which is both accurate and interesting. The review allows for, without mentioning, the serious extent to which the railroad and coal strikes and the subsequent government embargoes affected conditions in every city from which reports were forthcoming. Sympathy for the farmer is also expressed because of the hard fight he has had in the past few years.

Upon the whole, though, the report says that the country is to be congratulated on its present agricultural and industrial phases, and, in anticipation of a heavy fall business, urges the continued importance of conserving reserves for the use only of current and stabilized business, and agricultural requirements of legitimate character.

The reports for Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia follows:

Kentucky

Kentucky gives us reports indicating good general conditions. As to crops, they are of fine character except the wheat and oats are disappointing. A fine yield of corn, hay, fruit and vegetables. The average reports give excellent showing as to the character and yield of Burley tobacco. Hogs and cattle abundant. Industrially good reports predominate as to activity of coal mines, also general manufacturing and trade. The banks are rapidly approaching normal. The farmers are more encouraged, notwithstanding a natural shrinkage in farm land values established during and immediately following the war.

Tennessee

While cotton reports are unfavorable the word we get about miscellaneous crops and particularly fruit, are quite good. The banks, generally are showing a much improved tone Deposits have generally increased and manufacturing, in nearly all lines, show practically a normal activity. The coal mines are doing a good business, although greatly hampered the past few months by transportation conditions. Tobacco culture is decidedly on the increase here, and reports indicate a good crop this year.

Virginia

We get advices of general conditions and particularly coal mining activity. The mercantile trade has been stimulated under a new wage adjustment. The stock and cattle growing sections are encouraged through improved quality of the product, as well as a much more favorable market than for two years past. Tobacco reports are very favorable, likewise we are informed of increased deposits in the banks, and a general air of activity in practically all lines. On the Eastern Shore we are also advised of a great stimulation of business energy after a lapse due to strike and embargo conditions.

BOOM DAYS EDITOR VISITS HERE THIS WEEK

J. W. Campbell, veteran newspaper man and insurance agent of Middlesboro, is here this week, after an absence of about a year. Mr. Campbell, who celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday last Tuesday, says that Middlesboro is his home and his voting place and that, though he spends a great deal of his time now visiting around among his children, when he gets ready to settle down he is coming back here.

Mr. Campbell came to Middlesboro in 1889 and during the early boom days ran the Middlesboro Herald as a daily, with Henry Watterson, Jr., son of the famous editor. As the boom declined, so did the paper. Watterson left but Mr. Campbell continued the publication as a weekly in partnership with his son, Dortch Campbell. The latter, now an editor in Monroe, La., started the Mountain Herald, a small magazine which he later sold to I. M. U.

Mr. Campbell was in politics here a number of years holding several city offices He is the only Democrat who ever carried all four precincts of the city.

ENTERTAINMENT OF GIRL SCOUTS GOOD

Program of Varied Acts Is Enjoyed —Miss Adriana Bracci, Soloist, Stars.

Novel and clever in every way was the entertainment, "Evening of Smiles," given last night by the Red Rose Troop of Girl Scouts at the school auditorium. Great credit is due the actors themselves and their directors, Mrs. W. C. Stair, captain of the troop, Miss Henrietta Gordon and Miss Margaret Davis, lieutenants, who were assisted by Miss Bertha Hoe and Mrs. Nellie M. Castle.

The stage was attractively decorated in Hallowe'en style with stern and smiling Jack-o'-lanterns all around the edge, alternating with dolls startlingly attired in ghost, witch or goblin costume The setting for the tableaux scenes was very pretty, too

The program began with a grand march and drill by the Red Rose Troop each member dressed in white with a red tie. The drill, perfectly performed, was followed by the song, "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the pledge of allegiance.

Then followed in succession the reading, "Nine Little Goblins," by Elizabeth Chandler, the song, "Keep the Glow in Old Glory," by eight scouts, and the reading, "Little Orphan Annie," by Minnie Mae Chandler, each creditable done.

The male quartet, next on the program, won much applause. The quartet consists of R. B. Hatfield, Bill Smith Warren Seale, and C. G. Smyth, accompanied on the piano by C. O Brown, and they sang "Call Me Back, Pal o' Mine," "Ten Little Fingers and Ten Little Toes," and several encores in delightful close harmony.

A song, "Black Eyed Susans," by the troop came next, Miss Lola Smith and Miss Adriana Bracci starring as leading ladies. The girls were dressed to represent "black-eyed Susans." A clever reading by Virginia Stiles, "When the Frost is n the Pumpkin," followed. Miss Stiles was dressed in farmer costume, with a cob pipe in her mouth and the mountaineer's tuneless whistle well mastered. Miss Waunetta Wester next sang a solo.

A pretty solo, "Poor Butterfly," by Miss Adriana Bracci followed, with a background of kneling girls in butter fly costumes and Elizabeth Chandler, the "poor butterfly," lying in the center.

The Rev. W. K. McClure gave a short talk on "Why Girls Need Scouting." This was followed by a beautiful still picture tableau in white, "Three Graces," posed by Edith Sloan, Helen Lewis and Adriana Bracci.

The last number was a pageant with two girls dressed to represent each nationality, Dutch, Russian, Indian, Hawaiian, French, Irish, Scotch, negro, Spanish, Italian, with Miss Henrietta Gordon, dressed as Columbia, carrying the flag, last to appear. The high point of the pageant, if not of the evening, was the solo, an Italian opera air, sung in Italian by Miss Adriana Bracci, who was dressed in Italian costume. Miss Bracci has one of the most exquisite soprano voices we have heard in so young a girl, and this, combined with her grace and attractive appearance, fortell a splendid future.

METHODIST PLAN SPECIAL SERVICES IN REMODELED CHURCH

Special homecoming services will be held at the M. E. Church, South, tomorrow. For the past few weeks services have been held in the Manring Theatre while the church building has been repaired and remodeled extensively.

The old Columbia poplar, which has been a landmark in Middlesboro for so many years but which of recent date has grown into an unsightly tree, has been removed.

HARLAN FORFEITS FOOTBALL GAME TO M. H. S. 1 TO 0

Eligibility of Players Causes Discussion Resulting in Game Being Called Off in the Second Quarter.

T. R. HILL WAS REFEREE AND J. R. RAMEY UMPIRE

The football game this afternoon, scheduled to be played between the Harlan and Middlesboro High Schools was forfeited by the Harlan team a few minutes after the second quarter was started. The local lads had previously scored a touchdown as the result of an on-side kick by Van Beber, which went over the Harlan goal line, and which was recovered by McWilliams. Middlesboro failed at goal, the score before the forfeiture being 6 to 0 in favor of Middlesboro.

The game was forfeited by Referee Russ Hill when Harlan refused to send in a substitute for Alexander, who was banished from the game for an alleged disparaging remark to Referee Hill. Middlesboro gained possession of the ball on her ten yard line, and Van Beber punted, the ball hitting one of the Harlan men as it sailed over the line of scrimmage, and going out of bounds on Middlesboro's 30 yard line. Middlesboro recovered outside the line, and Referee Hill awarded the oval to the locals. Then Alexander, it is alleged, remarked to the referee that "tha's all right, boys, we can play all twelve men." Hill immediately sent the offending player to the sidelines, and Coach Meek of Harlan, made the excuse that he didn't have another man to replace Alexander, although he brought fifteen men with him. The Harlanites were given two minutes to replace the banished man and resume, and failing to take the field, Referee Hill announced to the spectators that the game was forfeited to Middlesboro 1 to 0.

Before the play was started an argument as to the eligibility of W. Lyons and Howard was started, but Middlesboro agreed to let these men play, rather than disappoint the spectators.

The fire department was called out twice today. The first call, about 12:30 o'clock, was to the home of Mrs. P. Burnett on Twenty-first Street. This was a false alarm, however, as there was no fire.

A THOUGHT

A THOUGHT .....

Let not mercy and truth forsake thee; bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart. —Proverbs 3:3.

Religion should be to every man: not merely a creed but an experience; not a restraint but an inspiration; not an insurance for the next world but a program for the present.—James Stalker.

SENTENCES BOY TO SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Over at Winchester some days ago a youth who had been convicted of forgery was sentenced to attend Sunday school and church services each Sunday for one year, the added penalty being that he must report to the judge each Monday morning and prove that he had complied with his sentence the day before.

At first this would seem to be an unusual sentence, which it is, but, upon deliberation, one is at once impressed with the importance of the sentence. Many youths have been made confirmed criminals by sending them to the house of corrections or to jail for petty crimes when a similar sentence would have meant a complete reformation in their lives. When a youth is convicted and sentenced to a term in prison he is forced to labor under a handicap throughout life, regardless of his conduct in the years following. This handicap oftimes causes such youths to lose self-respect, to become so hardened to the criticisms of their associates that they lose respect for the law also and soon become hardened criminals. On the other hand, if many such youths were forced to attend Sunday school and church services each Sabbath day they would soon become so imbued with the spirit of righteousness that they would lose all desire to do wrong and the habit of attending religious services would make of them regular attendants upon religious services and result in their redemption from wrong doing.

It would seem that the judge who imposed the above mentioned sentence upon this youth has a vision for greater things in life and has confidence in humanity, believing that with the proper religious training this and other youths may be saved from a life of shame and untold suffering, in which we concur and feel that other judges throughout the land should notice.—Springfield Sun.

BREAD-LINE.

How far are you removed from the bread-line? If you lost your job and your income were entirely cut off, how many years, months or weeks would it be before you had to seek charity?

The Morris Plan Banks are making loans to about 2,000,000 people a year. At the annual convention of the heads of these banks, they tell two interesting things about people who come to them for money:

FIRST: The average loan is $186, though some loans run as high as $5000, as low as $50.

SECOND: Three-fourths of the borrowers have no property, are unable to furnish security. They have to get responsible people to go good for them by endorsement.

From people who borrow small sums from banks, we pass to another class. You meet them right along—trying to raise loans among their friends.

Every office or shop of any size has at least one person who is always a certain amount of money behind the game. It may be 50 cents or $5 on some other sum.

Whatever it is, it seems to be the improvident one's borrowing capacity. If you watch, you get so you know just how much he is going to ask for when he rushes up and snakes hands warmly.

A certain fellow seems to be always borrowing $5. He pays it back and soon borrows it again—from the same source or some one else. Often he has a route that he works in a circle, like the gent who used to do a lot of walking in accumulating his jag.

This fellow is chronically $5 behind the game—just that much removed from the bread line. One of the great financial mysteries is why he doesn't manager to get $5 ahead of the game, so he can borrow from himself instead of his friends.

Borrowing small sums or cups of flour becomes a habit.

Housewives have noticed that certain neighbors are eternally borrowing the same things, time after time.

Borrowing started back in the days when an improvident cave man saw his neighbor catch a big string of fish or wild birds or animals. You can picture the improvident man rushing to the hard working hunter with this proposition: "Lend me a bird or a carcass and I'll pay you back when I kill some."

A certain number of unfortunates are driven to borrowing from their friends, by sheer bad luck. The chronic borrower, however, is usually a plain old fashioned specimen of what country town people call shiftlessness.

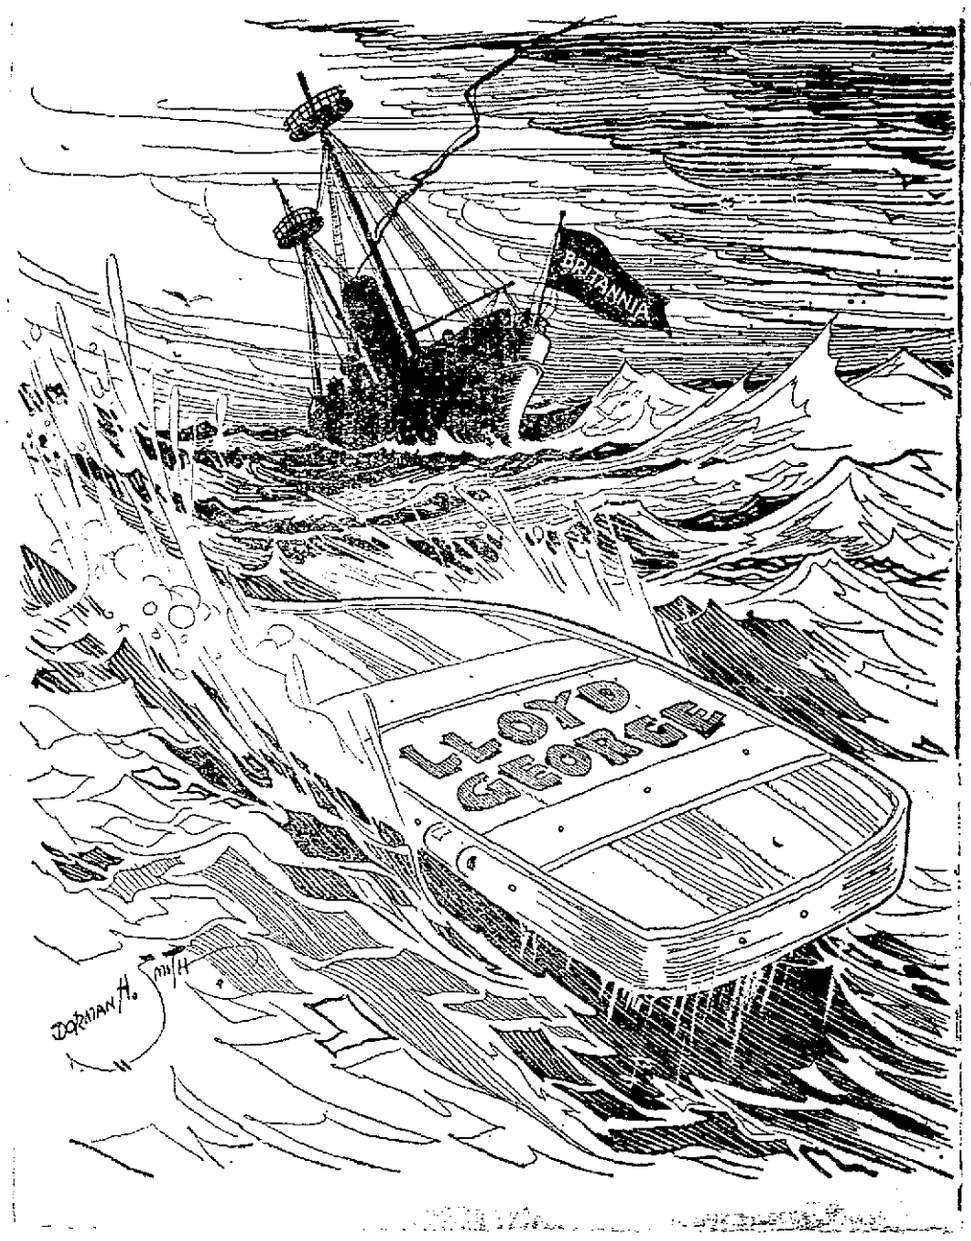
THE LOST RUDDER



Billy Evans Says:

While the building of the Ohio State stadium might make it seem that the big universities were specializing in sport, such is far from the truth.

The horseshoe stadium at Ohio state is simply the center of Ohio State's sport or athletic activity.

The slogan today is athletics that will interest many instead of merely a few who have great proficiency in their particular line of sport.

The horseshoe stadium which will seat close to 70,000 persons was built to take care of the big spectacles, the varsity football program.

However, varsity football, and the stadium is just one of the many athletic activities at State. The others appeal to those who desire exercise for pleasure, health and efficiency, rather than the glory that goes to the college hero.

A program has been mapped out by the university which calls for the ultimate construction of 100 tennis courts 24 intramural diamonds, eight football fields and scores of horseshoe pitching courts.

HONEYMOONERS ABROAD

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Enjoying a honeymoon in Italy and at the same time secretly investigating the suspected intrigues of COUSINS, his employers' European representative,

JACK DARYEA, together with his bride,

EDNA is seized by Fascisti on the way from Naples to Rome.

Go On With The Story

Had Jack been alone he would have been tempted to make rash resistance to th demand of the Fascisti to leave the train and accompany them.

But there was Edna to consider and Jack knew the Fascisti to be hotheaded youths who thought they were better entitled to defend Italy than the Italian government itself, and that resistance would be utter folly.

He and Edna scrambled their things together and were escorted off the train to a crude tarracks while the express went on to Rome without them.

Here an English speaking Italian acted as interpreter.

"Word is received," he said importantly, "that two Americans—radicals, who wish to meddle in others' affairs—are on their way to Rome to organize a movement against the Fascisti. We must have proof it is not so."

Jack was too angry to laugh. He demanded to know who had given this information. They declined to tell him and Jack's suspicions were stronger than ever.

It took more than an hour's talking, translating, questioning and the showing of papers to settle the doubts of the self-constituted guardians of Italy's welfare—excitable youths often in clash with government troops—that Jack and Edna did not constitute a menace to them. The Daryeas were then freed without apology or amends.

The next train for Rome would be a midnight journey, but Jack eager to get there at the earliest possible moment induced Edna to make the uncomfortable trip, and she was too weary and unnerved to resist.

They came into Rome the next morning. The world-famed Roman wall; the dome of St. Peters, the largest in the world; a glimpse of historic ruins and Rome's seven hills, filled Edna's mind with excitement.

But Jack was on tiptoe to learn what Cousins had in store for them at the company's offices in Rome.

"Jack—oh, Jack, look at those miles and miles of arches—the marvelous viaduct over the Roman Campagna—a thousand years—"

"Umm-h," said Jack looking at his watch and wondering what time the office would open.

Edna said nothing more until they had ducked riven across the wide plaza of the railroad station and up the broad, modern street teeming with traffic and colorful with officers in the light-blue capes and handsome trappings, to their hotel.

"I've arranged a bully sight-seeing trip for you, Eds," said Jack, as they breakfasted, "fine guide and everything. I'll have to run to the office. Be back by lunch time."

A kiss and off he went.

He ran up the steps of the A. E. S. Company in the Coso, but before he could open the door it opened from within and there stepped out with an unctuous smile of welcome—Monsieur Cousins.

She scoffed the gridiron lover
As he tried to score.
He never stopped to look at her—
Oh, boy, it made her sore.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

TREARURE-TROVE

By Berton Braley

A mighty good thing to seek after,
Is laughter;
The blood when we chuckle and snicker
Runs quicker.
The doctors will tell you a snigger
Gives vigor,
And jokes, if they're not too sardonic,
Are tonic.

It's really much wiser to frivol
Than snivel;
And folks shouldn't ever be frowning
On Clowning.
The fellow whose jests sets us shaking
And quirking
Is making life fuller of savor,
And braver!

While out of throats we can jiggle
A giggle
We'll face any fate with no flurry
Of worry.
So here's to the bird at whose chaffing
We're laughing,
Who turns all our woes and troubles
To bubbles;
He's worth more than solemn-faced preachers or teachers,
And so on his brow we are pressing
Our blessing!

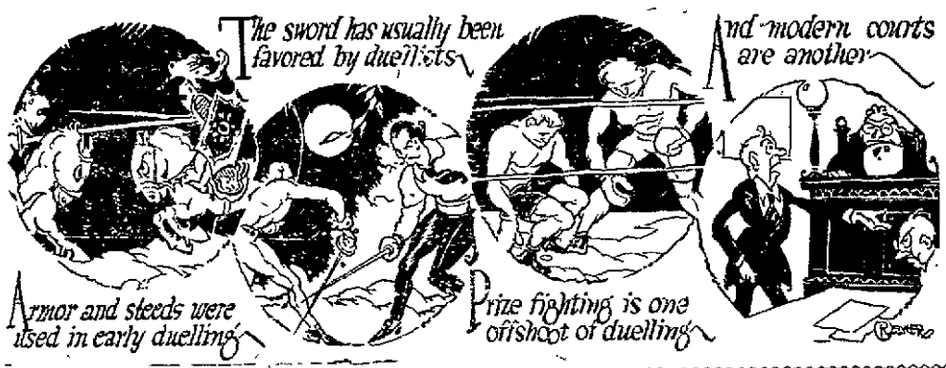
EVEN KENTUCKY MAY IGNORE DUEL



The sword has usually been favored by duellists
And modern courts are another
Armor and steeds were used in early duelling
Prize fighting is one offshoot of duelling

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 27.—State officials in Kentucky need not swear they never participated in duels, if a proposed measure becomes a law at the next legislature. This would eliminate reference to duelling from the oath of office administered.

Those favoring the change want to show the world that "the dark and bloody ground is as modern and law-abiding as the rest of these United States.

Duels outshone stump speeches in early day politics. But since 1849 they have passed out of fashion in connection with vote getting

Henry C. Pope and John T. Gray, Louisville men, fought the last duel of consequence that year. Shotguns loaded with single balls, were fired at 20 paces. Pope was mortally wounded

Lawyers Fought Most.

Later that year, an attorney named Smith and a school-teacher named Singer, satisfied HONOR by wounding each other with pistols at 11 paces. The crowd cheered lustily.

Public opinion then turned against duelling, and it was discarded in Kentucky.

Lawyers fought more duels than any other class of people, with legislators a close second.

One of the most famous Kentucky duels was that between William J. Graves and Jonathan Cilley, both members of Congress, fought in 1838. There was no quarrel between them, but Graves challenged Cilley because the later refused to accept a message from Graves, carried by a newspaper editor Cilley had quarreled with.

Cilley died from a rifle bullet fired by Graves He died, expressing highest regard for the man whos hot him.

Henry Clay fought two duels, one with Humphrey Marshall in 1808, in which both were slightly wounded, and one with John Randolph in 1826. The men were friends, and Randolph fired to miss. This affected Clay, and a reconciliation followed.

The Alexander Hamilton-Aaron Burr duel, fought in 1804, in which Hamilton was shot after he had fired into the air, really turned America against this practice. For half a century more, though, society tolerated this mode of settling affairs of honor, despite its banning by law. A man challenged either had to accept or be ostracized.

But to duelling, say authorities, civilization is indebted for its modern instrument of justice, the court of law. And prize fighting must point to the duel as its parent.

All quarrels of the nobility were settled by battle in the days when robber barrons were going out and kings were coming into fashion in Europe. The courts were arranged for the benefit of spectators, and kings and their courts were judges. Knights fought on horseback, using lances. Lesser persons battled it out with knives or poleaxes.

Then Came Lawyers

As this form of jurisprdence grew, many officials were named to conduct the contests. Many statutes and much red tape developed.

Litigants such as women, priests, children and old men were allowed to employ men to fight their duels for them. These men, called champions remain in modern courts as lawyers.

France, in 1547 supplanted the duel with the ancient Roman legal system. In England, however, the duel continued for two more centuries.

After the common people began aping the nobility by using weapons in their personal quarrels, professional duelists appeared, ready to fight for profit, charging admission to the combat. These, however, were d[illegible]ed coarse and took the last honor and chivalry out of the code of duelling in the eyes of the nobility.

In England, the beginning of the eighteenth century saw the deadly weapons of these men give way to fists —and thus was prize fighting evolved.

RELIGION IS NEEDED IN POLITICS, PRIEST PARTY LEADER SAYS

By Alice Rohe

Rome, Oct. 28.—"There is great need of religion in politics.

"Every citizen should take part in political life—why not a priest?"

These words of Don Luigi Sturzo, priest and politician, sum up the doctrine of this unique man who is probably the greatest single factor in Italian politics.

It was one of the few interviews ever given by the man who has sprung into the leadership of the Popular party, with 430,000 members and 107 representatives in Parliament. He is director of the party, credited with making and unmaking premiers—called by his opponents DICTATOR and political BOSS.

"The priest in politics is not a phenomenon peculiar to Italy," said Don Sturzo, who prefers to be called Professor Sturzo. "Austria, Germany, Holland and Czechoslovakia have priests in important political positions.

"While I rise early and say mass every morning, I do not give my time to spiritual work My activities are political. While all should understand politics, few are called to lead I work from eight in the morning until midnight. I eat very rapidly, and waste little time. It is necessary — there is much to be done.

"Religion is needed in politics because politics has a close relation to social life, and therefore should be based upon ethical principles. To us

Don Luigi Sturzo

—the Popolari—these ethical principles are the ethics of Christianity.

"After the war men craved some spiritual form of social life. What is more important than the growth of a political party based upon spiritual faith, ethical principles and social betterment ideas? Long ago in my native Sicily I began the work of building what I call a Christian Democracy."

Don Sturzo's preliminary work in Sicily comprised the establishment of parochial cooperative centers, professional unions and agricultural improvements. For 15 years he was mayor of a town of 50,000 inhabitants.

"One of the most important needs of Italy is migration," he said. "I hope the United States will soon open her arms to our emigrants. They cannot continue as they are."

REHABILITATION IS KENTUCKY PROBLEM

Chief Difficulty Industrial Because State Is Leader Ii Agricultural Pursuits.

By Associated Press

Cincinati, Oct. 28.—The State of Kentucky offers the most serious problem industrially in the employment of rehabilitated World War Veterans, chiefly because the State is a leader in agricultural pursuits, said a statement issued by W. H. Kemper, district employment representative of the United States Veterans Bureau of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

The city of Louisville from a government view point, is improving slowly as is Lexington. The greatest difficulty, Mr. Kemper said was the placing of men trained in the commercial pursuits such as bookkeeping and accounting. This, he explained, by saying that during the lowest ebb of business when the production of most companies were practically shut down the office peronnel of most organizations remained intact.

A steady demand for men in the machine trade was noted during the last three months, he said. A general improvement in practically every line of endeavor, he said, was recorded and that he had reason to believe that every one of the rehabilitated men trained in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, would be employed by December 1. He said that there were 3,000 men trained in the three states and that more than 97 per cent of them were now employed.

Ohio and Indiana, Mr. Kemper continued, have shown great progress in the employment of the rehabilitated veterans. The formen soldiers were offered their potential employers strictly on a merit basis and no concessions were asked by the employer on the grounds of patriotism.

Not only will this add great interest in athletics but will give the opportunity to further beautify the campus.

No university in the country pays more attention to intramural athletics than Ohio State. However, with the new conditions it will far surpass all others.

In thus centering the athletic activities it will be possible to eliminate many of the ball fields, tennis courts, and other branches of play that are now scattered over the campus

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Drink lots of water.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

A VAGABOND SONG

"There is something in the autumn
that's native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry
Of bugles going by,
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty aster like a smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir;
We must rise and follow her,
When from hill of fame
She calls and calls each vagabond by name

If You Are Well Bred

You never wipe hands that have fruit juice on them on a napkin before you have rinsed them in the finger bowl. To do so leaves an indelible stain which the hostess who prides herself on her linen abhors.

All juicy or sticky foods should be eaten with a fork. The reason for this is that the sight of a person covering his face with whipped cream as he eats a cream puff by hand, or dipping with juice as he sucks a peach is not a pleasant sight.

1 cup Brazil nuts
2 canned pimentos
1 head lettuce
1-2 cup mayonnaise or cooked dressing
1-2 cup cream, beaten until stiff

Pare, core and cut apples in small thin slices Clean and cut the celery in thin slices

Use for Duvetyn

There are many things you can do to duvetyn this season to make it distinctive.

The straight line is practically unbroken from the narrow hemline to the high, upstanding collar.

The sleeves are divided to show full undersleeves of white crepe de chine Silk braid begins at the collar, takes an abrupt turn at the waistline and follows a new course to the hemline.

The gown is navy blue, the braid black

Jail Ages Her

Here's a court room picture of Peggy Bea, acquitted in Kansas City of the charge of murdering F. Warren Anderson, "the man of many loves" The photograph shows big changes made in the girl's features, due to her weeks in the hospital, after attempting suicide, and her four months' imprisonment.

Skirt Lengths

Short jackets of brown caracul are effectively worn with brown velvet or duvetyn one-piece dresses. A narrow straight skirt, escaping the ground by from five to eight inches, gives the best line with the short fur coat.

City Protects This Girl's Voice

MISS MARION TALLEY.

KANSAS CITY, Oct 26.—The city council here has passed an ordinance prohibiting a young girl singer from appearing in concert.

Not that her voice is so bad—

But so good.

She is Marion Talley 15-year old school girl who comes from Nevada, Mo. Mme Schumann-Heink says she has the voice of a century

And the citizns here agree. They gave a benefit concert in a large auditorium, raised a good sized fund and will pay for the girl's training.

But they do not want her to spoil her chances by singing too much before she is properly developed.

So the mayor took a hand and had the municipal ordinance enacted

TURKEYS TO BE DEARER THIS YEAR

Difficulties In Turkey Raising Is Announced As Main Reason For The Big Decrease.

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 28.—Forebodings of high-priced turkeys this year are seen in Agriculture Department announcements that despite a steady increase in the price of turkeys production has steadily decreased. The average price received during the four months October to January 1915-16 was 15 cents a pound. The average price received during a similar period of 1920-21 was 32 cents per pound, according to the department's figures.

In 1900 the census figures showed 6,594,695 turkeys on farms in the United Staes, while in 1919 there were only 3,688,708 and in 1920, there were 3,627,028. During the last six years the price of turkeys has increased to the producer more than 100 per cent while during the past 20 years the number of turkeys produced has decreased about 50 per cent, the department states

The difficulties of raising turkeys is given as the reason for the production decrease. They are hard to raise, because of wandering propensities and a disease known as "blackhead" to which they are easy prey. It is very difficult to ship live turkeys to market and when shipped dressed there is a large amount of "shrinkage"

However, the raising of turkeys may be a very profitable occupation where there is an abundance of range, ample feed and reasonable freedom from predatory animals, the department adds.

Evening Costumes

One of the most lovely evening gowns exploited on Broadway is of silver cloth, gracefully draped, and beaded with the tiniest of steel cut beads.

White Satin

White satin is no longer exclusively for the bride, but for the society bud and the matron as well. Frequently it is made sleeveless, and depends upon its smartness for its line and drapery. Often it is beaded with white or colored beads.

Broadcloth, Ermine

While broadcloth and ermine are combined in a very charming coat dress. Wide cuffs and the long narrow collar which reaches to the waistline are of the fur. The gown is on straight, easy lines and is worn with a stunning turban of draped black velvet and silver.

Woman Judge

First Virginia woman to obecome a judge, is the distinction won by Mrs. Kerr Morehead Harris, Danville, Va. She has been appointed judge of the juvenile and domestic relations court, a position vested with broad powers.

The Flaming Jewel

By Robert W. Chambers

Copyright 1922 by George H. Doran Company

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Through the Adirondack forests rages a savage battle for possession of the Flaming Jwel, originally stolen from the refugee

COUNTESS THEODORICA of Esthonia by the great international thief,

QUINTANA.

In Paris Quintana was robbed of of the gem by MIKE CLINCH, an American soldier who brought the gem back to the disreputable hunting camp where he lived a life of crime ever since his legitimate business of building hunting parties had been destroyed years before by the uncle of JAMES DARRAGH. Darragh, going as Hal Smith, loves the countess and has sworn to restore the jewel to her.

Clinch is passionately fighting for the jewel as it represents the sole means of giving his beautiful step-daughter,

EVE STRAYER, the "education of a lady."

Eve and her lover,

TROOPER STORMONT, escape from Quintana, who with his gang has come to the camp to regain the jewel. Eve swims Star Pond with what she believed to be the real jewels in her mouth. Darragh takes what Eve thought was an empty jewel case from Quintana and finds the real jewels in a false bottom. Darragh learns that the countess and her companion are about to arrive at his hunting lodge.

CHAPTER III.

It was afternoon when Darragh awoke in his bunk, sore, stiff, confused in mind and battered in body.

Wier, hearing him astir, came in.

"How long have you been back? Did you meet the ladies with your flivver?" demanded Darragh, impatiently.

"I got to Five Lakes station just as the train came in. The young ladies were the only passengers who got out. I waited to get their two steamer trunks and then I drove them to Harrod's place—"

"Where did you say I was?" asked Darragh.

"Out in the woods, somewhere. The last I saw of them. Mrs. Ray had their handbags and Jerry and Tom were shouldering their trunks."

"I'm going up there right away," interrupted Darragh excitedly.

In a pathetic attempt to spruce up, he knotted the red bandana around his neck and pinched Salzar's hat into a peak.

"You look like one of Clinch's bums," remarked Wier with native honesty.

Darragh, chagrined, went to his bunk, pulled the morocco case from under the pillow and shoved it into the bosom of his shirt.

"That's the main thing, anyway," he thought. Then, turning to Wier, he asked whether Eve and Stormont had awakened.

It appeared that Trooper Stormont had saddled up and entered away shortly aftern sunrise, leaving word that he must hunt up his comrade, Trooper Lannis, at Ghost Lake.

"They're coming back this evening," added Wier. "He asks you to look out for Clinch's step-daughter."

"She's all right here. Can't you keep an eye on her, Ralph?"

"Very well, sir. But suppose she takes it into her head to leave—"

Darragh called back gaily: "She can't: she hasn't any clothes!" And away he strode in the gorgeous sunshine of a magnificent autumn day, all the clean and vigorous youth of him afire with anticipation of a reunion which the letter from his lady-love had transfigured into a tryst.

For, in that amazing courtship of a single day, he never dreamed that he had won the heart of that sad, white-faced hungry child in rags—silken tatters still stained with the blood of massacre—the very soles of her shoes still charred by the embers of her own home.

About half an hour later he came to himself with a distinct shock.

Straight ahead of him on the trail, and coming directly toward him was a figure in knickers and belted tweed.

Flecked sunlight slanted on the stranger's cheek and burnished hair, dappling face and figure with moving, golden spots.

Instantly Darragh knew and trembled.

But Theodorica of Esthonia had known him only in his uniform.

As she came toward him, lovely in her lithe and rounded grace, only friendly curiosity gazed ith im from her blue eyes.

Suddenly she knew him, went scarlet to her yellow hair, then white: and tried to speak—but had no control of the short, rosy upper lip which only quivered as he took her hands.

The forest was dead still around them save for the whisper of painted leaves sifting down from a sunlit vault above.

Finally, she said in a ghost of a voice: "My friend. * * *"

"If you accept his friendship. * * *"

"Friendship is to be share. * * * Ours on that day— Your share is as much as pleases—you."

"All that you have to give me, then."

"Take it* * * all I have* * *." Her blue eyes met his with a little effort. All courage is an effort.

Then that young man dropped on both knees at her feet and laid his lips to her soft hands.

In trembling silence she stood for a moment, then slowly sank an both knees to face him across their clasped hands.

So, in the gilded cathedral of the woods, pillared with silver, and azure-domed, the bethrothal of these two was sealed with clasp and lip.

Awed, a little fearful, she looked into her lover's eyes with a gaze so chaste, so oblivious to all things earthly, that the still purity of her face seemed a sacrament, and he scarcely dared touch the childish lips she offered.

But when the sacrament of the kiss had been accomplished, she rested one hand on his shoulder and rose, and drew him with her.

Then his moment came: he drew the emblazoned case from his breast, opened it, and, in silence, laid it in her hands. The blaze of the jewels in the sunshine almost blinded them.

That was his moment.

The next moment was Quintana's.

Darragh hadn't a chance. Out of the bushes two pistols were thrust hard against his stomach. Quintana's face was behind them. He wore no mask, but the three men with him watched him over the edges of handkerchiefs—over the sights of leveled rifles, too.

The youthful Grand Duchess had turned deadly white. One of Quintana's men took the morocco case from her hands and shoved her aside without ceremony.

Quintana leered at Darragh over his leveled weapons:

"My frien' Smith!" he exlaimed, softly. "So it is you, then, who have twice try to rob me of my property!

"Ah! You recollect? Yes? How you have rob me of a pacquet which contain only some chocolate?

Darragh's face was burning with a helpless rage.

"My frien', Smith," repeated Quintana, "do you recolle' what it was your say to me? Yes. How often it is the onexpected which so usually happen? You are quite correc,' Pami Smith. It has happen."

He glanced at the open jewel box which one of the masked men held, then, like lightning his sinisten eyes focused on Darragh.

"So," he said, "it was you also who rob me las' night of my property. What you do to Nick Salzar, eh?"

"Killed him," said Darragh. Dry to the lips, nerved for death. "I ought to have killed you, too, when I had the chance. But—I'm white, you see."

At the insult flung into his face over the muzzles of his own pistols, Quintana burst into laughter.

"Ah! You should have shot me! You are quite right, my frein'. I mus' say you have been very foolish."

He laughed again so hard that Darragh felt his pistols shaking against his body.

"So you kill Nick Salzar?" continued Quintana with perfect good humod. "My frien' I am oblige to you tor what you do. You are surpr'sed? Eh?It is ver' simple, my frien' Smith. What I want of a man who can be kill? Eh? Of what use is he to me? Voila!"

He laughed, patted Darragh on the shoulder with one of his pistols.

"You, now—you could be of use. Why? Because you are a better man than was Nick Salzar. He who kills is better than the dead."

Then, swiftly his dark features altered:

"My frien' Smith," he said, "I have come here for my property, not to kill. I have recover my property. Why shall I kill you? To say that I am a better man? Yes, perhaps. But also I should be oblige to say that also I am a fool. Yaas! A poor damfool."

Without shifting his eyes he made a motion with one pistol to his men. As they turned and entered the thicket, Quintana's intent gaze became murderous.

"If I mus' kill you I shall do so. Otherwise I have sufficient trouble to keep me from ennui. My frien,' I am going home to enjoy my property. If you live or die it signifies nothing to me. No! Why, for the pleasure of killing you, should I bring your dirty gendarmes on my heels?"

He looked away to the end of the thicket, venturing one swift a nd evil glance at the who who stood as though dazed.

"Listen attentively," he said to Darragh. 'One of my men remains hidden very near. He is a dead shot. His aim is at your—sweetheart's—body. You understand?"

"Yes."

"Very well. You shall not go away for one hour time. After that—" he took off his hat with a sweeping bow —"you may go to hell."

Behind him the bushes parted and closed.

Jose Quintana had made his adieux.

One-Sided Effects

The one sided effect is frequently seen in evening frocks, that is, on partly draped shoulder and the other one strapless. The one sleeve effect is also noticed in some of the latest Paris importations.

The nice thing about a bad start is it gives you more to brag about when you get ahead.

FELT TIRED, SO TIRED

Indiana Lady Says She Was Run-Down, Suffered With Her Back, Took Cardui, and Got Well.

Richmond, Ind.—"I thought I would write a line or so, to say that I owe my good health and strength to Cardui," says a letter from Mrs. Cora Courtney, 31 Railroad Street, this city.

"I was all run-down until my family thought they would lose me," writes Mrs. Courtney. "My husband coaxed me to take Cardui, so, to please him, I did, and will say I do not regret it, for I am able to do all my work and do my shopping.

"I have five children, four in school, my husband and a boarder to do for, and I do all my own work for all of us, and find time to play. We all praise Cardui. Every sick and run-down woman should take this wonderful medicine.

"I suffered with my back; a very weak feeling in my limbs.

"I felt hardly able to drag; just tired—so tired all the time.

"It was an effort for me to do anything, but Cardui helped me so I felt like a different woman."

If you are in a run-down physical condition, suffering as this Indiana lady says she did, give Cardui a fair trial. It should help you.
